

IFA appoints new Manager, Member Learning and Development

– Andrew Gunn

I am pleased to announce that the Institute of Financial Advisers (IFA) has appointed Andrew Gunn as its new Manager, Member Learning and Development.

Mr Gunn started at IFA on 6 May 2013 and will manage IFA's Learning and Development programmes. This includes the IFA professional development days, seminar series, webinars, and online Member CPD service. He will also look after the Learning Partner relationships which deliver partner programmes on a wide range of professional development topics.

Chief executive Penny Mudford says “Mr Gunn is well qualified to manage IFA's learning and development programmes. He has previously been a business owner and has experience in management, human resources, and governance.”

Mudford says “Andrew is a strategic thinker and understands the challenges that members face in a changing environment.”

Mr Gunn has a commercial background as a business owner and consultant. He is an experienced director, including governance experience in the training sector. His qualifications include BCom (Auckland University) and MBA (Canterbury University).

Mr Gunn takes over the position previously filled by Dr Joe Grayland.
